

University of the Republic

Ethical Standards

The University of the Republic expects its students to be of high moral character.

The University of the Republic expects its students to abide by the law. However, when a law is considered unjust and unfounded, the University of the Republic believes it is our duty as a free people to speak out against such laws in a civil and law abiding manner, as our forefathers have done.

The University of the Republic demands that its students be free of any unresolved lawful restraints (i.e. indictments, warrants, etc.) prior to and while attending the University of the Republic.

The University of the Republic expects civility in interacting with our fellow man, unless that person is serving in an organized and recognized armed force, whose nation or resistance force is actively involved in a just war.

The University of the Republic maintains that every person is responsible for his or her behavior.

The University of the Republic maintains that every person is responsible for his or her own choice of words.

The University of the Republic maintains that every person is ultimately responsible for his or her own socioeconomic status and debts.

The University of the Republic expects sobriety while in the midst of the general population.

The University of the Republic demands that no student will knowingly sell drugs to a fellow citizen.

The University of the Republic reserves the right to consider the behavior of students in terms of being acceptable or unacceptable, ethical and unethical, on a case by case basis.

